Designing for the unimaginable

Discussant: Professor Stefan White

Jos Boys is Co-Director of The DisOrdinary Architecture Project. She believes that starting from the richness of our bio and neuro-diversity is a vital creative generator for designers, a disruptor of conventional design norms, and a means to open up architecture to alternative kinds of imagining.

Benedict Phillips is an artist, making a broad range of work including public art, performance, photography and media art. His project '3D thinkers in a 2D World' investigates the possibilities of exploring the internal workings of the dyslexic mind to reveal different ways of thinking.
